

StreamVault — 2025 Campaign Performance Summary

Marketing Intelligence Division | Internal Distribution

Overview

The Stellar Run launch campaign (March-April 2025) was the most successful in company history, generating a 4.2x ROAS across all channels. The campaign leveraged influencer partnerships with 12 mid-tier creators (500K–2M followers) resulting in organic amplification that extended reach by an estimated 340%. Total campaign spend was $2.1M with $8.8M in attributed revenue.

Channel Breakdown

Channel	Spend	Impressions	Conversions	ROAS
Social Media	$780K	14.2M	18,400	4.8x
Influencer	$420K	8.9M	12,100	5.1x
TV Ads	$550K	22.0M	7,200	2.9x
Search	$240K	3.1M	8,900	6.2x
Email	$110K	1.8M	4,400	7.1x

Why Stellar Run is Trending

Stellar Run's virality is driven by multiple reinforcing factors. The film's climactic zero-gravity sequence generated over 2.4 million social shares organically. Critics gave it an 88% approval rating on aggregate review platforms. The film taps into current cultural trends around space exploration and AI, resonating strongly with the 18-34 demographic. Email re-engagement campaigns targeted lapsed subscribers with personalized clips, driving a 31% re-activation rate.

Dark Orbit vs Last Kingdom Analysis

Dark Orbit (Sci-Fi, 2025) and Last Kingdom (Drama, 2024) serve different audience segments. Dark Orbit leads in viewer volume (890K views) with strong 18-34 appeal. Last Kingdom achieves higher completion rates (84% vs 74%) and superior average ratings (8.4 vs 7.9), indicating deeper engagement from a more loyal but smaller audience. Marketing spend for Last Kingdom was 40% lower, yielding better efficiency. Dark Orbit benefits from franchise awareness and visual spectacle.